With Horizon officially confirmed as the next character to come to Apex Legends, players can use the new gravitational elevators to get in the air and spin around the map. Here's everything you need to know about machines, including each location and how to activate them. Respawn Entertainment added a monitor to the shooting range on October 13, which began playing videos featuring Dr. Mary Somers, who will become the ninth Apex Games legend under her alter-ego Horizon, probably at the launch of Season 7. Before you start competing though, Horizon has some special experiences that it needs from you to finish. By completing these challenges, you can use the new gravitational elevators that have been installed in both Kings Canyon and World's Edge, which pull you up into the sky and give you a new rotation option when in the heat of battle. You'll need Horizon's key activation card to access these machines, so be sure to take on the challenges provided by the new Apex Legends character before you get to their locations. How to activate Horizon's gravitational elevators Before you actually use gravitational elevators, you'll need to enter the key map to make them work. First, you'll have to head to the range and interact with the monitor, which will then play a special Horizon message. Leave the range, and you will receive a notification that three new challenges have been unlocked, which you need to complete as the next step in the process. Fortunately, these challenges aren't too difficult, so you should be able to tick them in a couple of games, as you just need to deal with damage in the air, get knockdowns, and survive opponents. The three challenges are: Deal 10 damage while the air Get 10 knockdowns Survive to 120 opponents Once you've finished these, head back to the firing range, and you should now be able to open the supply tray that sits next to the screen. Inside, you'll find the key map you need to start gravitational elevators. Respawn EntertainmentThe supply bin is to the right of the monitor. Apex Legends Gravity Lift locations Now that you have your key card, it's time to use it to activate gravity elevators. There are two of these machines on each card, so no matter if you play on World's Edge or Kings Canyon, you will be able to use the devices. Gravity gravity are an extremely handy rotation tool, allowing you to exit an area if the circle closes, or giving you an emergency exit if you are attacked. They won't stay active long after use, so other teams probably won't be able to keep up in your beam. The machines also have a recharge time that should give you time to escape. Image via Respawn Entertainment Apex Legends is slowly concluding its sixth season, and the hype levels for the next one is already out of the charts. The seventh season of Apex will arrive with a new champion, Horizon, and it has been directing for its big debut for a few weeks now. It all started with horizon that took over the training grounds, where she assigned each player missions to accomplish to help her in her wee experience. If you've already completed the following quests, then you'll be eligible for the second set of A Wee Experiment challenges where you'll need to activate the gravitational elevators scattered around World's Edge and Kings Canyon. The sixth season of Apex Legends ends in one and fans are eagerly awaiting the start of the next chapter of the BR. Called Ascension, Season 7 will extend to a brand new Olympus card with a new competitor, Horizon, joining the Apex Games. In the build-up of season seven of Apex, teasers in the game for the upcoming legend was put online a few weeks ago. Dr. Mary Somers, aka Horizon, first appeared in an interacting with a monitor at the firing range. As a scientist, she did some tests and wanted to collect data from the players. She has assigned players with small experimental challenges to complete as part of her Wee Experiment.
